How easy is it to relate to people who are different from you? Are you aware of the impact your communication style has on other people? If communication breaks down, do you know why?

The ability to build relationships and to communicate effectively is crucial to success. Sometimes it's easy, but occasionally you feel as though you're hitting your head against a brick wall. We all have a preferred style of communicating; if you can learn the various styles that work best for different people and different situations, you can communicate more effectively in any circumstance.

This lively interactive session provides a memorable model of the four behavioural and communication styles. The lessons you'll learn apply equally to all forms of communication – written reports and proposals, 1:1 discussions, meetings, presentations and pitches. It's fun, it's memorable – and it works.

Clare Willis is passionate about the need for focused, effective and persuasive communication in business. She has over 20 years experience of coaching individuals and groups to help them achieve potential and put ideas across with confidence, clarity and impact. She has extensive experience in the property sector, running training sessions and coaching pitch teams on bids with a value ranging from £50k to £5 billion.

This event is kindly support by Speechly Bircham. Drinks and canapés will be provided after the seminar and there will be an opportunity to network with other guests.
